TEA SELECTION

Selected for the Cavendish from the Award winning Northern Tea Merchants, Chesterfield

Large Leaf English Breakfast Tea

During the Regency period (1811 – 1820), teas from China and India were the only teas available for the (very wealthy) to drink. It wasn't until the 1850's, that Indian teas really started to trickle into of the UK marketplace, and by the mid 1890's, Chinese tea was somewhat in decline, as tea drinkers in the UK seemed to prefer their Indian Orange Pekoe to their Chinese Chun Mees and Hysons!

This Large Leaf English Breakfast Blend is a faithful reproduction of blends that would have been sold in the UK and been on connoisseurs breakfast tables from about 1800 – 1910 during the Regency period
